DUB

*NARS
PR and product launch. A selection of the new Nars range was presented in this luxury presentation pack and distributed to the magazine writers for editorial.*

DUB

DUB is our code for bespoke productions. Its true you can create almost anything as a package direct mail piece, to communicate a message, and that's something we do.

At BoxcoUK when it comes to Bespoke we begin with a blank canvass, and we create a presentation product that works for.

Read on for inspiration and a guide to how to take advantage of our services

Our Process

for bespoke enquiries

Most of our clients are recommended to us from a previous satisfied customer, that's because we partner with our clients to produce presentation products that work for your business. Due to the bespoke nature of almost all our products we have a process we follow to create your solution.

Step 1

Telephone conversation / face to face Interview

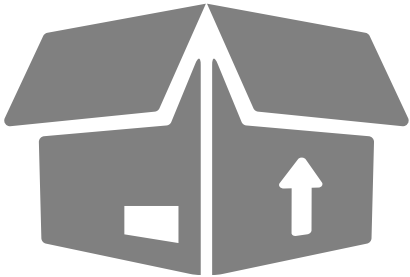

We need to talk. In this information age of multimedia, our bespoke solutions take care and attention. We need to know what you're trying to achieve, when by and how you came to meet us in the first place, the nature of your audience, and what's unique about you. This initial conversation should enable us to make some informed suggestions, and talk through some ideas that will work for you

Step 2

Guide prices for Budgeting

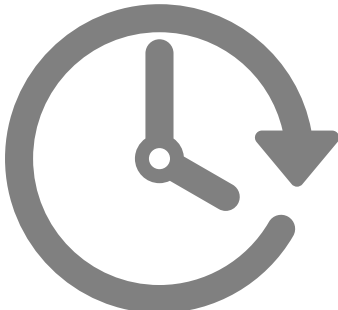

Then we go away and discuss with the team here at BoxcoUK. A creative Powwow will bring up further ideas, ways to create something that will work, and a guide on what it might cost. Until we have produced prototypes we can't commit to any formal pricing. Throughout the process of prototyping and trialling we will keep this budget in mind, if we have reason to believe that it will be affected we will discuss this with you.

Step 3

Plain Prototypes

Prototypes are excellent for an initial trial, our studio rates are reasonable. We will require samples of the complete contents, either free issue, or we will source the other items required, and create a first prototype for consideration. A prototype is CAD produced as a one off from our digital template file, so it can be further adapted, and amended to better suit your requirement.

Step 4

Trial and Test

Trialling the product to be sure it will work is largely up to you. You know your market best. "Will clients appreciate it?", "Will it have an impact?" "Is it better than what we do already? And very importantly does it fit the contents that it needs to?

Step 5 Quotation

When the prototype is complete and approved by you we will submit our formal quotation, generally by email. This will often include optional extras that can be discussed, to be sure that we create the best solution for you. This quotation will form the basis for your order.

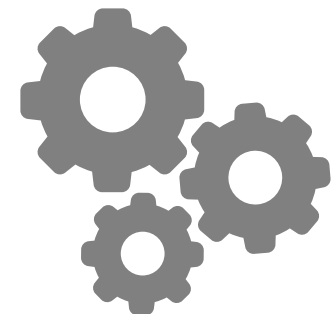

Step 6 Order

On receipt of your purchase order, if required for the project we will supply a laydown guide for the artwork and approvals.

Step 7 Design and Artwork to our supplied templates

Most clients have internal marketing and design teams or external agencies that work with a brand and understand what looks best for the presentation. Our studio are always on hand to answer any questions on the design and layout and are familiar with the regular graphics software. Alternatively our creative team can help and advise on the graphics for your product, these are charged as one off origination charges, depending on the involvement and we are happy to discuss the costs at this stage.

Step 8 Production

Okay we're on the go, our production team takes great care with colour representations and any other specific client requests, our in house packing and fulfilment service allows your internal contact to watch the final bringing together of the project. This ensures that your product is just what you require.
